WILLIAM JESSUP
UNIVERSITY

Change or die...is more than an alarming statement, it is a cardinal truth. The way we structure higher education to deliver truth to our generation and beyond must always be changing in order to meet the demands of a rapidly changing world. This is upsetting to many because we like things the way they used to be.

William Jessup University is changing daily...not in its commitment to Biblical truth, but in how this truth encounters students in a variety of academic programs, including our historic programs in ministry. We are very different from our beginning in 1939 when 14 students gathered in the living room of our home at 306 S. 5th Street in San Jose and Dad opened the Bible and his own life and taught them. There was something very special about those days, but we cannot do college today the same way.

The traditional Bible college is now history in the western United States. Where once many thrived...now almost none exist. That model, though familiar and comfortable, is no longer viable. Therefore, we will continue to change...for change is the pathway of usefulness and growth in the Kingdom.

The change to a Christian liberal arts university is a reflective process which explores the expression of core values within a new context. Although our faculty produced and implemented a new curriculum for fall 2004, the context of change for the University has moved more rapidly than we could predict, and they have revised the Foundational Studies requirements in Bible and general education again. The biblical and general education component of the curriculum establishes a perspective which gives coherence and purpose to all knowledge.

We will thoughtfully add new academic programs as fast as our resources allow, for we want to touch as many as possible with a quality Christian higher education experience and send them forth into churches, classrooms and offices throughout the state, country and around the world. We are continuing to nurture our new majors in teacher education and business. As reported elsewhere in this magazine, we will start an exciting new major in public policy this fall. We have not yet decided on the next one, but several are under consideration.

Whether a student embraces a major in church ministry, a service profession or a market place career, we will continue to integrate faith and learning in all that we teach. The study of the scriptures continues to be required of all students, and chapel and participation in a weekly spiritual formation group remain an integral part of our life together on campus. All students, faculty and staff regularly engage in community service.

God is blessing us in ways we could not have predicted...and we are just beginning! Since moving to Rocklin we have had two years of record enrollment. The future is rich with opportunity. Our desire is to become a Christ-centered university of high quality. We're not just talking about newer and bigger, but deeper and better. Growth is only limited if we are unwilling to be creative and fail to adapt to the changing world around us. I dream of WJU becoming a global center for equipping 4,000 to 5,000 committed students someday and watching them change the world and the landscape of eternity by marching forward under Calvary's cross! ✠

Public Policy Degree Program

Dr. Kay Llovio, Vice President for Academic Affairs, announced a new Public Policy Degree Program at the Constitution Day Forum. She noted that Christian higher education has a unique opportunity to positively impact public policy today and tomorrow. Since arriving in Rocklin, University administrators have been encouraged by local, regional and national leaders to consider a major that focuses on government and policy. As the capital of one of the most influential states in the country, Sacramento provides exceptional opportunities for students to learn from leading government officials and policymakers. The Public Policy Degree Program combines theoretical principles and practical application for leadership and service in the public sector. A public policy major extends beyond political processes and structures to include specific public issues and policy initiatives. Students are encouraged to explore legal and moral issues within a Judeo-Christian world view, as they also benefit from the insights and experiences of reputable practitioners from varied backgrounds, sectors, and perspectives. The program offers students firsthand experiences through internships with policymakers.

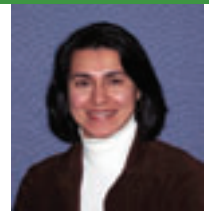

Sosamma Samuel-Burnett, J.D., advisory member to the University, proposed a public policy degree program and served as a consultant to establish and develop the program. Ms. Samuel-Burnett has considerable experience in constitutional law, international advocacy, and public policy, particularly in the areas of international human rights and civil rights. She has served in advocacy and policy institutions in California, Minnesota, Washington DC, and overseas. The program has also benefited from an advisory group of California policymakers and practitioners, including Superior Court Judge Larry Gaddis, California Assemblyman Tim Leslie, Dr. Ken Campbell, Bill Halldin, Joe Pursch, and Ken Shepard, who provided significant insights and suggested important opportunities for the program's implementation.

Former U.S. Attorney General John Ashcroft Featured Speaker at Forum for Students, Faculty and Community Leaders

By Sosamma Samuel-Burnett

Sosamma
Samuel-Burnett, J.D.

A standing room only crowd of 300 enthusiastically welcomed former U.S. Attorney General John Ashcroft with a standing ovation. Mr. Ashcroft, the featured speaker for William Jessup University's first Constitution Day Forum, helped launch the University's new Public Policy Degree Program, scheduled to begin Fall '06.

Mr. Ashcroft demonstrated humor, intelligence, and commitment to Christian faith. He told the audience that he was pleased to be on the campus of a Christian university because it was a "unique place...without limits to inquiries of truth — where those inquiries could lead to God." He thanked Assemblyman Tim Leslie for his initial invitation and introduction to William Jessup University.

Mr. Ashcroft stated his own commitment to Christian education and noted that his father had been president of a number of Christian colleges. In addition, both Mr. Ashcroft and his wife, Janet, have worked as law professors. Throughout the years, he has taken to heart his father's statement that the "spirit of education is educating the spirit."

Through its new Public Policy Degree Program, Mr. Ashcroft stated that William Jessup University has a significant role and opportunity in public policy. He noted that "it is important to know the framework of government" to address critical issues.

Mr. Ashcroft emphasized, "The most important ingredient in our country is liberty...that liberty is from our Creator and is a gift from God. Freedom is part and parcel of the way our world should be." He quoted Thomas Jefferson and other founding fathers to support the idea that our country was founded on this principle — that liberty was given to us by God and embodied in the U.S. Constitution. He stated, "The founders were not ignorant to assigning credit for freedom to God." He further stated, "Those who do not want to recognize God in our country have the right to do so, but to say that there was no influence of God in the founding of our country would require rewriting history."

Mr. Ashcroft also quoted Deuteronomy 30:19, which states: "This day I call heaven and earth as witnesses against you that I have set before you life and death, blessings and curses. Now choose life, so that you and your children may live and that you may love the Lord your God, listen to his voice, and hold fast to him..."

He noted that freedom involves choices that can make a difference and that "changing the future is one of the great gifts of God." As Thomas Paine stated, "We have the power to make the world over again." Mr. Ashcroft emphasized that the Christian and founding principles in our country do not impose our faith, a significant distinction from the terrorists. He noted, "A terrorist is not a person without beliefs. But a terrorist does not trust you and me and does not trust his beliefs will be accepted in the marketplace."

Constitution Day

With this understanding of liberty and freedom, Mr. Ashcroft also outlined his experiences as a policymaker. In particular, he shared his experience facing the “assault on fundamental freedom” that occurred on September 11, 2001. When he arrived at the Command Center following the tragedies, the President told him “Don’t ever let this happen again.” This statement provided the marching orders for Mr. Ashcroft to direct a series of historical changes to the Justice Department and efforts to strengthen protections of the American people.

Mr. Ashcroft dispelled a “myth in American society” that states, “Every law diminishes freedom.” He rejected that myth by indicating that laws that protect against violence ensure individual freedom from harm and that “the test of law is whether it enhances freedom.”

At the close of his remarks, Mr. Ashcroft noted that “Americans are not better than everyone else because we are everyone else—we can not be better than ourselves.” But what makes America special is its recognition of human dignity and value of freedom. He noted that Emma Lazarus “best understood the power and catalytic energy of liberty to transform society” when she wrote the words inscribed on the Statue of Liberty: “Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses yearning to breathe free.”

Ashcroft declared that he is proud to live in a country with this Constitution and the principles of liberty and freedom that it upholds.

Following his remarks, Mr. Ashcroft responded to a number of preselected questions. His responses were candid and humorous, but also poignant. They revealed his experience as an educator and policymaker at the state and national levels, including a professor of law, auditor and Governor of Missouri, U.S. Senator, and U.S. Attorney General.

Among his responses, he stated that one of his most difficult decisions as a policymaker was overseeing the first execution in the State of Missouri when he was Governor. He also noted the next highest executive office in the land after the office of the Governor is President. However, he noted the tremendous national and global responsibility of the President. His experience as U.S. Attorney General gave him a sense of the “awesome burden” of the President as a leader. And, when asked the final question — “In your opinion, what is the most pressing public policy issue of today?” — Mr. Ashcroft responded, “The value of human life.”

Celebrating the Enduring Significance of the Constitution

William Jessup University planned its first Constitution Day Forum in response to federal legislation that every educational institution receiving federal funding “hold an educational program” each year in observance of “Constitution Day and Citizenship Day.” President Jessup remarked, “This is something we are delighted to do not just because Congress and the President have enacted legislation, but because it’s the right thing to do.” Dr. Jessup introduced the Forum with prayer and discussed the significance of celebrating the enduring principles of the U.S. Constitution. “On September 17, 1787, the United States Constitution was signed by 39 of the 55 delegates attending the Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia...and was later ratified by the original 13 colonies. In 2004 Congress designated September 17 as a day to memorialize the Constitution. This September [2005] will be the first time America sees a nation-wide effort to observe and remember its founding with the recognition of Constitution Day. Today, William Jessup University is proud to salute the Constitution and share its Christian heritage with you.”

William Jessup University students Mary McElroy, a freshman from Vacaville, California, and Hayley Baker, a freshman from Roseville, California, led the audience in a recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance and the Preamble to the Constitution. Through this recitation, the audience shared the recognition that our founding values were established under God.

“I was very impressed with the University and its students. I know John Ashcroft was, too, as we talked about it afterwards. It was a great morning and a great event.” – Marvin “Buzz” Oates, Sacramento business leader

Former Attorney General John Ashcroft has used his experience as an educator in policymaking, underscoring the maxim that “in everything we do, we teach.” Indeed, he has now returned to academia as professor of law and policy at Regent University, where he shares his commitment to faith, his dedication to public service, and his excellence in policymaking with students.

Similarly, William Jessup University’s new Public Policy Degree Program is committed to developing future policymakers who “love God and listen to God’s voice” in addressing issues and determining public policy. The University intends to educate future leaders...perhaps even a future U.S. Attorney General. †

Faith in Business – Student Profile

Faith Pasqualini has had at least ten job offers since June, in areas such as information technology, investment, event planning, hospitality and tourism, and public relations – a testament to her personality, skills and choices of how she spends her time. And by immersing herself in both academic theory and practical application, she has developed a sense of what is needed in the world of business – ethics, purpose, dependability, initiative and competence.

A 22-year-old senior who is due to graduate in May, Faith began as a counseling psychology major at San Jose Christian College in 2001. She left after two years to pursue a business degree, which at that time, was not a major at SJCC. She completed her A.S. in business administration at Ocean County College in New Jersey, where her father lives. Faith still wanted to obtain her bachelor's degree from a Christian college, and found that with its move to Rocklin, WJU had added a business major.

In her business classes, she has learned necessary skills such as management and leadership, conflict resolution, employee appraisal and communication, entrepreneurial basics, use of online resources, practical computer skills, operations management and effective business communications. Guest lectures from local business leaders give realistic insight to possible career paths. She also credits the professors for their ability to integrate faith into the classes, by stressing how ethics, honesty and sensitivity are crucial to success in business. Students are challenged to examine personal and corporate motives in a business environment.

When she began taking business classes at WJU, Faith was unsure she had the talents and abilities to be successful in business. However, she states that she has gained confidence in herself and has been challenged to do her best work. Smaller class sizes allow each student to engage in role-playing and interaction with professors, in contrast to her classes at a large state school where students are expected to glean information from lectures, books and testing.

Dr. Roger Salstrom, WJU Business Management Department chair, who serves on the Rocklin Area Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors, knew of the Chamber's need for a summer intern. He referred Faith to the Chamber and, although she was in New Jersey with her dad at the time, she spoke with Robin Trimble, Chamber CEO, over the phone. She flew back for the interview. Trimble recalls, "During her interview, Faith said she wanted to be my apprentice – I hired her on the spot! I cancelled all my other interviews after that." Trimble says Faith is confident, articulate, and an excellent listener – all attributes a hiring manager is looking for in a successful candidate.

While working for the Chamber, Faith helped organize programs and events such as "Hot Chili & Cool Cars" which, with Faith's efforts, raised over $11,000, and a breakfast fundraiser for Congressman John Doolittle which raised over $2,000. Local business owners describe Faith as "kind," "supportive," and "professional." Faith was honored on campus with a Certificate of Appreciation and letter of recommendation from Chamber President Scott Yuill and Robin Trimble for her service. Faith says her internship "was the greatest opportunity I've had. I got to network, meet local leaders and city council members. It helped me see the reality of how the business world works. Robin (Trimble) was a great Christian mentor. She has knowledge of both corporate and non-profit business."

Faith also spends much of her time away from class managing WJU's student enterprise "Godly Grounds," an on-campus coffee house located within the Commons, an informal student gathering area. Now in her third semester of managing, she is responsible for hiring, scheduling, marketing, accounting, budgeting and training. She and her staff of five meet monthly to train in sales and service.

Her career goal is to work in the area of event planning, where she can put her talent for multi-tasking to work. She enjoys the opportunities for people-oriented work, management and leadership. In a "strengths test" that she took in one of last year's classes, Faith was told that her top five strengths were being an arranger, adapter, achiever, developer and includer. Each of these affirm her career goal. She also would like to use her talents in a church setting, helping churches to function more like a business. By this, she means that some churches have created a subculture that is completely unrelated to secular society, resulting in Christians retreating to a comfortable, but disconnected, bubble. Thus, they can become ineffective. She wants to see churches create a counterculture, not a subculture, to meet the needs of seekers and members.

Faith sees campus life at WJU as that of a tight community and family. "I love knowing everyone." Faith describes herself as people-oriented and outgoing. She strives for consistency in her life, stating, "I want to be the same person everywhere I go, with everyone I meet. I think there needs to be consistency to show character within the Christian culture. When Christians don't demonstrate that, it catches me off guard." ❗

New Students Make WJU Home

Candace Avila

Age: 17

Status: 1st year freshman

Major: Teacher Education

Candace was 12 years old when her dad, who had worked for Hewlett-Packard for 16 years, took an early retirement from his job. Her family became full time missionaries in Peru, and Candace and her younger brother and sister attended a missionary school. Peru had a great need for missionaries, and her father, a native to Colombia, spoke the language. “I was very against the idea of going, but after the survey trip, God changed my heart.” Candace spent her high school years in Peru, and learned to enjoy teaching.

Her family furloughed in January 2005, and gave Candace, then a high school graduate, a chance to visit the colleges to which she had applied. She had been accepted to Biola, Moody, Bryan College and William Jessup University. Her last visit was to WJU on a Preview Day. Candace says, “I was nervous on all the other campuses. It was very different here. God kept confirming, through various experiences, that this was where I was supposed to be. Before I left that day, I wrote the (commitment) check.”

Wanting to provide the same opportunity for other prospective students, Candace has already participated in a Preview Day in November. She will also start work in the Admissions Office as a telecounselor, making calls to prospective students and answering their questions about the University.

As for campus life, Candace states, “I’m loving it here. I live in Beta Hall and all 12 (suitemates) of us have gotten so close. I’ve never felt like such a community that fast.” Smaller class sizes and personable faculty have made the college transition easier. “The close relationships I have with my professors feels a lot like high school. I’m more at ease about accepting assignments. I can learn better when I know they care like that. They’ve helped me grow in my faith.” ❖

Johnas Street

Age: 20

Status: 1st year freshman

Major: Business Management

Being the eighth of ten children in his family, Johnas Street was looking for a college where the residential setting felt like a family. The nephew of WNBA great and WJU Women’s Basketball Coach Ruthie Bolton, Johnas chose to come to William Jessup University.

He attends the University on a basketball scholarship, often starting for the Warriors. He is recognized by his peers and WJU staff as someone who has a positive influence on others, demonstrates leadership ability, and is always smiling. To that, Johnas says, “I’m too blessed to be stressed.”

He grew up in and graduated from high school in McLain, Mississippi. After graduation, he toured for a year with a gospel group named “Five Young Men,” performing as a tenor in churches and youth summits in the Atlanta area. He is often asked to sing the national anthem for Warrior games.

With a major in business, and the gift of vocal talent, he plans to reach his goal of becoming a professional entertainer. His music style of choice is R&B, and he is planning a demo album this summer to help launch his career.

When he isn’t practicing basketball for three hours a day or at a game, he works in the WJU dining hall. Even here, he sees WJU as home. “You know everyone like a family.” His personal motto? “Never stop believing, never stop achieving.” ❖

Ashley Rico

Age: 20

Status: Junior transfer student

Major: Business Management

After spending two years at Yuba College in Marysville, California, Ashley wanted to pursue a degree in Athletic Training and was accepted to Azusa Pacific University. Then, about two weeks before classes started at APU, she felt God was changing her life direction. Due to a severe knee injury, Ashley was unsure she could meet the physical challenges of an athletic trainer.

Her sister, Alex, already attended WJU. Ashley called WJU on Friday before the start of classes last fall, and applied. Admissions expedited her application, and on Monday, received her transcripts at 9:30 a.m. and officially accepted her at 10:00 a.m. She took her placement exams at 11:00 a.m. and at 12:30 p.m., she registered for classes. That night, she moved into the dorms. “I started classes on Tuesday,” she said, “What school can you attend that would willingly and efficiently do that for a student?”

Ashley has emerged as a natural for on-campus life. She supports athletic events, plans a short-term mission to Africa at the end of the spring semester, and sings on the worship team at the Lighthouse of Natomas. She states, “The campus is small enough to be an intimate family atmosphere. It’s set up for community with others.” Ashley also credits the faculty for this community, stating, “I really like how the professors are so accessible for help – any time you need them. They’re highly educated, but still prefer you to call them by their first name.” ❖

University Enjoys Donation

Joe Womack
Vice President for Advancement

The University enjoyed an overall increase in giving in all categories in fiscal year 2005 (July 1, 2004 – June 30, 2005) when compared to the previous fiscal year. Friends, churches, businesses, organizations, and alumni donated $2,557,921 in Fiscal Year (FY) 2005, up from the Fiscal Year (FY) 2004 total of $2,489,086.

This total includes gifts toward the general fund, student scholarships (restricted and unrestricted), and special projects, as well as capital campaign contributions.

Total giving increased three percent in FY05, with significant increases experienced in church and alumni giving. Church giving increased 31% in FY05 ($222,057) over the FY04 total of $169,742 and alumni giving increased 37% in FY05 ($186,574) up from $136,285 in FY04.

Director of Alumni and Church Relations, Jim Jessup, attributed the increase in church giving to a number of congregations that became regular supporters of WJU in FY05. "We are excited about new churches coming on board, and continue to be blessed by those faithful congregations that have supported the University for some time. In addition to new congregational support on a regular basis, a number of one-time offerings taken were also identified as crucial to the increase in church giving."

The following is an alphabetical list of all individuals, churches, organizations, and businesses that contributed to William Jessup University in the FY05. Because of the generosity and support of those listed, the University is able to fulfill its mission of Christ-centered higher education.

WILLIAM JESSUP
UNIVERSITY

Jim Jessup
Director of Alumni and Church Relations

In addition to the monthly and one-time gifts given by these churches, many deserve a special thank you for going the extra mile when they took a special offering above and beyond their budgeted support. Central Christian Church of San Jose gave the single largest offering in the history of the University.

Additional thanks go out to the following churches who just recently joined our partnership: Journey Church of Folsom, CA and Southside Community Church of Sacramento, CA. Special thanks to Bayside Church of Granite Bay for taking a one time offering this summer that was a great boost to our scholarship fund for the 2005 fall start.

Helping students reach their goals

Over this last year, 67 churches gave to the William Jessup University Fund to help with scholarships for students. The total given by churches for the fiscal year (July 1, 2004 - June 30, 2005) was $222,057. These churches not only benefit students through scholarship assistance, but their partnership in ministry with WJU provides experiences and opportunities for students and staff to minister to the “whole body of Christ.” Thank you for your faithful support as a partner church in Christ-centered higher education:

1st Annual University Fund Dinner Raises

Over 260 stepped out in style for the 1st Annual University Fund Dinner on November 12th. The black-tie event, complete with a “student shoe” contest, exceeded its fund raising goal of $100,000.

Jack and Nancy Horton, faithful supporters of WJU in both San Jose and Rocklin were honored as the event’s founding sponsors. Also honored were supporting sponsors Judd Riggs of Teichert, Inc. and patron sponsors Phil Oates of the Oates Family Foundation, and Spencer and Alice Mills.

Themed “Celebrating Tomorrow Today,” the dinner was the first of its kind at the Rocklin campus. “This was a significant evening for the University, not simply in terms of the funds raised to support student scholarships, but with regard to connections made with the community. We are excited about the opportunity to build new relationships and strengthen existing ones,” said Joe Womack, vice president for advancement. California Assemblyman Tim Leslie said, “I continue to be impressed with William Jessup University. To have an institution of this merit located in our area is truly an advantage and asset to the community.”

An empty warehouse on campus was transformed by volunteers and staff. Guests were welcomed to campus by glowing luminaries, string musicians and an hors d’ouvres reception. A gourmet dinner was provided by visiting Chef Christophe Ehrhart and Bon Appetit. Mark Standriff, of The Fish Radio, emceed the evening. The Peter Martin Jazz Quartet closed the evening with a series of songs that retraced the origin of jazz music. Bill Halldin of Halldin Public Relations and a Community Relations Council member said, “The first University Fund Dinner was a great showcase for William Jessup University. The community support was tremendous and organizers did a fabulous job transforming a warehouse into an elegant site for an upscale event.” Special thanks went to Diana Burke of Simple Pleasures Catering for her tireless hours of coordination and assistance.

Student speaker Jade Frantz

“The majority of these South Placer area guests are new to William Jessup University. We look forward to this event growing and improving year after year.”

Attendees were encouraged to get into the spirit of the University by wearing “student shoes” with their formal wear. Bob and Corinne Odineal of Roseville won the contest for most original footwear for their matching hobbit feet.

It’s wonderful to see the University grow through the support of the South Placer Community. I expect this to continue to be a first class university for our area.”
– Brett Storey, Rocklin City Council Member

Over $104,000 for Scholarships

Brant Perrigo (pastor of One Life Christian Church in Lincoln), Michelle Perrigo and Jennifer Stephens enjoy the gourmet dinner buffet.

WJU students participated throughout the event, from the musical welcome, to waiting tables, and to entertainment by The Way. Student speaker Jade Frantz, a sophomore at WJU and winner of a speech contest, spoke of her thankfulness for the University and its supporters, which allowed her to attend WJU on scholarship. Jade is one of the 85 percent of WJU students who require some type of financial assistance to attend the University. Kathleen Tucker, director of University Fund, stated, "Our graduates serve as Christian leaders, business owners and world changers in more than 50 countries. We can make a difference in our own future by investing in these students today."

Dear WSU Supporter,

My name is Cole Orick, and I will be graduating this year with a B.S. in Christian Education. While studying at William Jessup University, I have had the privilege of playing basketball for the Warriors for three years. Over the years, I have led the team as captain, and was also named USCAA Academic All-American and Athletic All-American twice. I put my studies and athletics to work last summer during various basketball camps for local youth. I was able to teach young kids about the game, but more importantly, about God. I was given many opportunities to show my faith and what God has done in my life. I have been blessed to receive a scholarship to support my education at WSU. Thank you for making this possible for me and my fellow students.

*In Christ,
Cole Orick*

Men's Soccer Team Finishes Second in the Nation

Andrew Koekemoer

The William Jessup University men's soccer team made history this fall as they became the University's first soccer team to qualify for a national tournament. The United States Collegiate Athletic Association (USCAA) national tournament took place November 3-5 in Indiana on the campus of St. Mary-of-the-Woods College. The Warriors were defeated 0-2 by Bluefield College in the championship game.

In their opening game of the tournament the Warriors played number one seeded New Hampshire Tech. The game was tied at 2-2, when the Warriors defeated their opponents in a double overtime shootout.

Sophomore Kyle Navarro and Junior Ryan Chepernich were both voted to the USCAA All-American team. Junior Kyle Sterry was also named to the Academic All-American team. Sophomore Andrew Koekemoer, an All-American Honorable Mention, led the Warriors with 14 goals and 3 assists of the season.

This is the first time a WJU soccer team has qualified for post-season play. "This is a very exciting time for our team and the University," stated Head Coach Trenton Mol, "It is a great honor to compete at the national level and represent William Jessup University. It has happened through a solid team effort." ❖

Fall Sports at William Jessup Create Excitement

William Jessup University entered the fall 2005 school year as a full fledged NAIA member. Adding two new coaches in women's soccer and women's volleyball, and cross country returning from a championship season in 2004, it was interesting to see the athletic season unfold. Here are some highlights from the fall sports season:

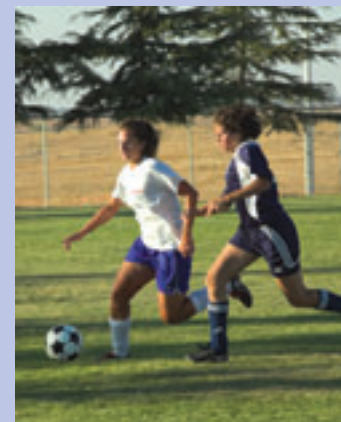

- ❖ Men's soccer returned nine players from last year's team and added four freshman and five transfers to make up a team that finished second at the USCAA National Championship. Coach Trenton Mol led the team to a 9-8 record, 4-3 in the Cal-Pac and a record 5 game winning streak.
- ❖ The women's soccer team went into their second official season returning eight players. The Lady Warriors finished the season 6-9 and were led all season by the tough and consistent play of senior Jamie Howard who finished the season with 7 goals and 3 assists. Jamie was also voted the Regional NAIA player of the week in October for her 4 goals against Pacific Union College. WJU set a University record with a 5 game winning streak that included wins over Bethany, Pacific Union, and Mills. Coach Julie Smithson-Otero will go into her second season with much success to build upon.
- ❖ Women's volleyball was led this season by first-year coach Steve Neptune. The Lady Warriors played an exciting style of volleyball with many aggressive plays at the net and were led by the steady play of junior setter Rekha Arakeri, junior Ashley Johansen, and junior Lauren Galindo.
- ❖ Cross-country running entered its second season at WJU. Last season, Sara Kelly ran away with the USCAA individual national championship. However, this season proved to be more challenging. The men's team finished 12th in the NAIA regional meet with Sean Campbell leading the way in that race with a time of 28:28. The women's team was unable to field a team due to injuries, which plagued both teams throughout the season. The men won the CSU-East Bay Invitational as well as place third as a team in the Cal Pac Conference meet. Amy Mendez and Jacob Rydman were both voted Academic All Americans for the USCAA.

Congratulations to all of our athletes on a great season for fall sports as William Jessup University continues to "Champion Christ through Sport." ❖
